++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Often wet and very windy on Sunday.

Today:
Heavy rain, accompanied by squally winds will soon clear to the east. After a brief brighter, less windy interlude, showers or longer spells of rain will soon return from the west. Gales developing, especially in coastal areas. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Showers, some heavy, continuing to affect much of the country, perhaps merging into longer spells of rain across north Wales. Gales, perhaps severe at first, lasting well into the night. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Monday:
More showers throughout Monday, some heavy with hail and thunder, but some sunny spells in between. Strong to gale force winds at first, easing through the day. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
A mixture of sunshine and showers on Tuesday and Wednesday, the showers mainly in coastal areas. Drier on Thursday. Rather cold, given northerly winds, with some overnight frost.
